Citing Archival Sources

According to the Chicago Manual of Style, there is no agreement on the order of elements in archival and manuscript collection citations. What does this mean for you, the researcher?

- The good news: there is considerable freedom in archival citation formats.
- The bad news: the author must develop his or her own consistent citation formats.

The elements of an archival or manuscript source citation must include:

- Author or creator of the collection
- Type of records in the collection
- Date span of collection
- Manuscript or series number
- Name of holding repository
- Location of holding repository

To cite Mennonite Church USA Archives – Elkhart material in a bibliography, follow these examples:

Personal papers

Organizational records

To cite Mennonite Church USA Archives – Elkhart material in a footnote, follow these examples:

Personal papers

Organizational records

The first footnote citation of archival records or manuscripts should include all citation elements. Subsequent footnotes need to include only the collection’s creator and type of records (e.g. Peter J. and Elfrieda Dyck Papers; Hispanic Mennonite Convention Records).
